Columbian Logistics Network Joins DCA

Michigan Based Warehousing & Logistics Known for 'Legendary Customer Service'

Detroit, MI, January 26, 2006— Columbian Logistics Network, parent company of Columbian Distribution Services, Columbian Express Services, Sprinter (the FTL carrier), Sprinter Brokerage and Columbian Interstate, today announced that it has joined the Distribution Services of America (DCA) marketing group.

“The DCA marketing concept is a good one, bringing the responsiveness, flexibility and know-how of the best regional service providers together for national coverage,” says Columbian President, Dick Wickard. “I’ve been in this industry a long time and know the integrity of the executive management of these companies. I’m proud to be considered a member of such a quality group in the logistics field.”

John Zevalkink, CEO of Columbian Logistics Network, said, “We’re looking forward to continuing our service to the economic development and logistics excellence in this region – as part of TeamDCA. “

About Columbian Logistics Network

Columbian has been providing ‘legendary customer service,’ for warehousing customers throughout Michigan for more than 100 years. As the time to move goods from manufacturer or grower to consumer has dramatically accelerated, Columbian has invested in software and technology to flexibly respond to customers’ needs. Columbian Logistics Network has expanded over the years to include more than 900,000 sq feet of ambient and temperature-controlled warehouse space, customized logistics programs for food manufacturing companies, as well as, LTL, Brokerage and Truckload services. From dedicated logistics for key accounts to operating a Foreign Trade Zone (FTZ) to service the increasing use of global supply chains by regional manufacturers, Columbian does whatever it takes to maintain its proud record of ‘legendary customer service.’ For more info or to request a quote, go to: www.columbian.us
